

WOW! Promotes Amol Shah to Senior Vice President of IT

Shah now responsible for leading direction of IT department and driving WOW! technology innovation

Englewood, Colo. – August 29, 2018 – WOW! Internet, Cable & Phone (NYSE: WOW) today announced the promotion of Amol Shah from vice president of software development & data management to senior vice president of IT. Shah will lead WOW!'s IT department in enterprise architecture, software development, billing systems, data warehouse, infrastructure and information security, while continuing to advance WOW!'s commitment to providing excellent customer service and solutions.

“One of our core principles as a company is spirit of service and this applies to both our internal and external teams here at WOW!,” said Matt Bell, chief technology officer at WOW!. “Since Amol has been with us, he has embodied this spirit and more. His promotion is well deserved as he will continue to lead the IT team toward innovation and success in our technology and services departments.”

Shah has been with WOW! for nearly ten years, most recently serving as vice president of software development for WOW!. Before his time at WOW!, Shah gained extensive experience as an engineer in the telecommunications and IT services industry, where he served as a senior consultant for Statera, a senior software engineer for Mentis Broadband and a lead software engineer for Qwest Communications (now CenturyLink).

“I have enjoyed my years with WOW! and I am excited to be able to continue my growth with the company in this new role,” said Shah. “One of the many things that makes WOW! such an exceptional company is the dedication to customers and the services we provide. I look forward to continuing to provide the best service possible and lead the IT team to further success.”

Shah received a dual Bachelor of Science degree in computer science and electrical engineering from Rowan University and earned his master's degree in electrical engineering from Stanford University.
